

5. STUDENT SUPPORT AND PROGRESSION

Students' welfare is one of the most important focuses for this department. It is persistently working on enhancing the knowledge and skills of the students and also to create a friendly and bias-free environment for the overall growth of the students. It is reflected in the students' participation in the academic gatherings as well as many extracurricular activities like cultural programs, competitions, field visits and excursions and educational tours. For supporting the students, there are Notice Boards in the department specifically dedicated for students' related information dissemination and also for propagation of recruitments related news or advertisements on regular basis. To improve students' academic performance, they are given time for remedial classes and one-on-one doubt clearing sessions.

The Department of Anthropology offers three different programs in anthropology namely Undergraduate, Postgraduate and PhD. The progression of the students from undergraduate to postgraduate and finally to PhD program is being shown in the Table 5.1. It is seen from the table that students move forward from UG to take admission in the PG program even though they are less in number and eventually these few students joined the PhD program later on. Besides, there are many students who come from other departments or Universities to directly take admission in PG and PhD in this department.
